THE NEWPORT MERCURY was established in June, 1788, and is now in its one hundred and forty-fifth year. It is the oldest newspaper in the United States, and with less than half a dozen exceptions, the oldest printed in the English language. It is a large quarto weekly of forty-eight columns filled with interesting reading—editorial, state, local and general news, well selected fiction, and valuable farmers and household departments. Reaching so many households in this and other states, the limited space given to advertising is very valuable to advertisers. Specimen copies sent free, and special terms given advertisers by addressing the publisher.

School Committee.

The regular monthly meeting of the school committee was held Monday evening when considerable important business was considered. The matter of a new high school building was brought up, but it was decided to lay this matter over for further consideration. All the members were present except the chairman, and Mr. William P. Sheffield, Jr., was elected chairman pro tem.

Superintendent Lull read his monthly report, containing the following: The public schools opened today for the new year, with a corps of 50 regular teachers and elected assistants in service. Substitutes are in place of Miss Bradley, who is in Europe, and Misses E. G. Nuss, Brazier and Downing, and Mrs. Stierne, who are ill. Three new teachers, Misses Driscoll, Potter and Van Home, have begun their duties in Cranston I, Carey II and Edward-Farwell IV. The appointed assistants will not be definitely assigned until the numbers per room have been more exactly determined, although several are today in their former places. Not more than four pupils should be admitted to the Calvert training class.

The total enrollment, as telephoned at three o'clock by the principals, is 3,108. It is divided among the schools as follows: Clarke, 155; Calender, 143; Calvert, 417; Carey, 323; Coddington, 549; Coggeshall, 389; Cranston, 201; Edward-Farwell, 149; Lenthall, 302; Parson, 15; Potter, 147; Rogers High School, 243. This total enrollment and apportionment will increase greatly during this week and month. Many children are at work.

By a special exchange with the publishers of the old two-book geographies new single books have been purchased for grade VI. Those of grade VI, which were exchanged last year, have been sent forward with the promoted pupils to grade VII, and next year they will be moved to grade VIII, where this subject is finished. In this way the whole book will be used during the three years, instead of one third being used three times in the same grade and two thirds left unused. Nichols arithmetic, book VI, has been placed in grade VII. This series is already used in grades III-VI. The best of the old books in VII have been sent to grade VIII to supply deficiencies.

The grandiloquent walks at the Calvert will be appreciated by the pupils and by the citizens who make the "cut-off" through the Calvert and Cranston yards a public thoroughfare. The new floors in the Cranston and Potter are a great improvement. As far as your superintendent can learn at this time the buildings are in excellent condition.

During the vacation six rooms have been decorated, through the exertions of a member of this board. Pictures, busts and bas-reliefs have been placed in these rooms.

The new trunk and labor law has now gone into effect. The commissioner of education has forwarded to this office copies of the law and the new labor certificates. By this law the excessive loss of time due to carrying milk in the morning ought to be prevented.

Because this committee meeting and the opening of the schools occurred on the same day, the general meeting of all teachers and assistants has been postponed until tomorrow.

The autumn supplies which were contracted for in the middle of last July have been delivered to the schools, with the exception of one order. All books are also in the hands of the pupils and there is no reason for any delay in beginning work.

In July all the boxes of supplementary reading belonging to grades III and IV were carefully examined. In this office, worn-out books and sets reported too difficult were removed, and new books substituted. On account of constant changes during several years the books were sadly in need of inspection, replacement and reassignment. They are now in good condition and once more in the hands of the teachers. Next January the boxes of grades V and VI should receive a similar overhauling.

After the reading of the report, Mr. Peckham reported that the committee on finance had been unable to secure any bids for furnishing coal and wood to the schools during the year. It was shown that six different buildings had no coal and others had small amounts, from a quarter of a ton up to 12 tons. The matter was left in the hands of the finance committee to report later.

Further leave of absence was granted to Miss Elizabeth G. Nuss on account of illness. The matter of increased pay for Miss Pauline Kierian, who has been employed as substitute for four years at five dollars a week, was referred to the superintendent. The committee on buildings recommended that the trees on the grounds of the Coddington school, of which Mr. Nason has made complaint, be removed. After considerable discussion the matter was left in the hands of the committee on buildings.

The matter of a new high school building was brought up and it was suggested that a committee be appointed to present the matter to the city council in order that the proposition to issue bonds might be laid before the people at the coming election. Mr. Burdick moved that a special meeting be called in order to give this important matter more consideration and the motion was carried. The applications of S. E. Gratrix and William S. Slocum, Jr., for the scholarship in Brown University were referred to the committee on high school.

The petition of A. H. Carson of South Kingstown, who is a taxpayer and voter in this city, to have his granddaughter admitted to the public schools without the payment of a tuition fee, was granted.

Recent Deaths.

Mrs. Sarah Wilcox West, widow of Mr. John H. West, died at her residence on Old Beach Road Tuesday, in her eighty-fifth year, after a long and lingering illness. Mrs. West had been an invalid for many years. She was a most estimable woman and had a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Five sons and two daughters survive her: Messrs. Fred, John H., Joseph and William H. West of this city; Frank West, of Chicago, and Mrs. Everett Henry and Mrs. George H. Taylor, of this city.

Patrick B. Burke died Wednesday morning at his residence on Branch Street after an illness of three weeks. He was a prominent member of many local societies, including Court Pride of the city, Foresters of America; Newport Conclave, No. 39, Knights of Sherwood Forest, and the Progressive Club. He leaves a widow and three children.

The shani attack on Newport, which was announced as occurring as we went to press last week, was continued during the evening and made a pretty sight for those who were in a position to observe it. The effect of the firing of the big guns was but slightly felt in the city, being much less than had been expected. The result of the battle will be known after the joint army and naval board finishes figuring.

Freebody Park was crowded last Sunday evening to hear Carrie Nation deliver her lecture on temperance. Although she was rather more rational and somewhat less sensational than she has been reported to be at times, she furnished considerable amusement for her hearers. It is doubtful if her visit was productive of much benefit to the cause of temperance.

News was received here Wednesday of the death of Dr. Christopher M. Bell, at Baden-Baden, Germany. He was one of the well-known summer residents, occupying a place on Bellevue avenue for twenty years or more.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Snow, of New Bedford, who have been spending a few days in Newport, guests of Dr. and Mrs. Sweet, on Spring street, have returned home.

The Board of Arbitration of the war games met at the Naval War College on Monday and, after organizing by electing Rear Admiral Stephen B. Luce president, adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

The extra troops which manned the forts during the progress of the "war", regulars and militiamen, have returned to their posts or to civil life after a very interesting tour of duty here.

The summer dog show of the Rhode Island Kennel Club was held at the Newport Casino on Tuesday. There was an excellent exhibition of dogs and much interest was taken. There was a number of Newport entries.

Mr. Russell K. Bryer of New York is spending September with his father Mr. Andrew Bryer, in this city.

Channing's New Pastor.

Rev. A. P. Record, pastor of the Austin Street Unitarian church of Cambridge, Mass., has resigned his pastorate of that church in order to accept a call to the Channing Memorial church of this city. Mr. Record has had remarkable success in his church work since graduating from the Harvard Divinity school in 1885. He has been in charge of the Cambridge church since 1887 and during that time has infused new life and vigor into the church, receiving the active co-operation and assistance of the church societies.

Mr. Record will assume the pastorate of the Channing church October first.

The Sherman Property.

The estate on Kay street, the property of the late Anthony S. Sherman, was sold at mortgagee's sale on Wednesday to satisfy two mortgages, one of $10,000 held by the Savings Bank of Newport, and one of $3000 held by Anthony Stewart.

On Thursday the furniture and other contents of the house were sold at auction. There was a large attendance at this sale. Some of the articles went very cheap considering their value.

The members of Aquidneck Grange are arranging for a picture entertainment to be given in the town hall this fall. Each member is asked to secure pictures of interest in or about the island of Rhode Island. These pictures are to be enlarged and shown by lanterns. As this is a new feature in this way of entertainment there is no reason why it should not prove a decided success in every way. The committee, with Mr. Charles H. Ward as chairman, meets with Mrs. J. Oscar Peckham on Saturday evening to further complete arrangements for the affair.

Mrs. Grace Nevell and son, of Bristol, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dodge in Middletown.

Opening of the Schools.

The public schools opened last Monday full to overflowing as usual. There are twenty or more overcrowded rooms in the various buildings, and by no means all of the expected pupils are registered yet. Many are out for one reason or another, work not finished, away on vacation, or slowness in registering, so that the numbers as they now stand will be increased considerably.

There are 88 regular teachers and elected assistants, and many more assistants will have to be appointed immediately.

Monday was devoted mainly to registering and assigning seats. On Tuesday some lessons were taken up, and by Wednesday the regular routine was about established. Much work remains to be done in relieving the overcrowded rooms by transferring pupils from the crowded rooms to one with more space. None of the appointed assistants have yet been assigned to rooms, but this will probably be done at the beginning of next week.

The worst case of crowding is in the high school. In the building on Church street, which was originally intended for about 100, there are 200. There are over thirty seated on benches and chairs patiently waiting for some place where they can have desks.

The enrollment as it now stands is as follows:

Clarke—I, 29; II, 46; III, 33; IV, 34; V, 40; total 178.
Calender—K, 21; I, 62; II, 43; III, 37; total 163.

Carey—K, 81; S, 34; N, 31; C, 94; III, 58; IV, 69; V, 59; VI, 43; total 339.

Middletown.

A very good attendance was present at the meeting of Aquidneck Grange Thursday evening. At the close of the meeting the Jeter family from Newport entertained the company with music and readings. Mrs. Cathrin A. Dodge, wife of the late Solomon Dodge, died at her home on Chapel street at 10 o'clock Monday morning at the age of 81 years. Mrs. Dodge was one of the oldest persons on the island, and the oldest member of the First Baptist Church, having joined in 1868. She was born Aug. 25, 1821. She was born Aug. 25, 1821. Mrs. Dodge leaves two sons and a daughter, who is the widow of the late Hon. Nicholas Ball.

Mrs. Jennings of Boston was a visitor in this city the past week.

Local Matters.

Two Fires.

Shortly after four o'clock Friday morning fire was discovered in the Read block at the corner of Marlboro and Thames street, owned by Harwood E. Read, and occupied by stores on the first floor and the Grand Army hall and Mowry's photographic studio on the second. An alarm was rung in from Box 3 and when the department responded the fire was burning briskly, flames pouring out from the roof in the rear. Chief Kirwin was among the first to reach the scene and, realizing the dangerous locality of the blaze, sent out a second alarm, calling for more men and hose.

The department did excellent work in subduing the flames, although considerable damage was done by fire and water before the men were recalled. The fire started in the kitchen of Allen's restaurant on the ground floor, apparently originating near the stove. It burned the kitchen and destroyed the contents, the wood work and walls being badly burned. The fire worked up at the rear through the second floor to the roof and proved a difficult one to handle through the partitions. Considerable water was thrown on before it was extinguished.

The damage will probably amount to something in the neighborhood of $1000, the bulk of which falls upon D. B. Allen and Harwood E. Read, both of whom were fully insured.

The Read block has been the scene of a number of fires in previous years and the building that stood on the same site was destroyed by fire a number of years ago. The alarm from Box 3 in the business portion of Thames street, followed so closely by a second alarm, called out a large number of business men of the city, notwithstanding the early hour of the morning.

There was an alarm of fire from Box 31 shortly before 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, calling the department to 11 West Narragansett avenue, where the tenement house owned by Dr. Horsman was found to be blazing considerably. The fire caught around the chimney on the third floor and burned the upper floor and roof considerably. The house was occupied by three families, and Daniel Beattie, who occupied the third floor, was ill and had to be carried out.

Dr. Horsman had but recently spent considerable money in overhauling the building and putting it into first class condition.

Rev. William F. Morrison, chaplain of the cruiser Olympia, committed suicide at the Chelsea Naval Hospital on Thursday. Chaplain Morrison was formerly stationed at Newport and was well known here. He was suffering from melancholia.

The annual Washington County Fair at South Kingstown this week has been largely attended. The entries were numerous and attractive and the exhibition of 1902 is considered a great success.

HOW TO PACK TRUNKS.

Some Valuable Points by an Expert Packman.

Packing a trunk is one of those things that each and every woman is supposed to know how to do better than any one else, but the truth is that there are good packers and very bad packers, though no one will own that she packs badly.

In packing many people make the mistake of putting the garments that are easiest to handle on top, but an expert packer puts them at the bottom of the trunk, where they are held firmly, for tight packing is the secret of good packing, says a writer in the Washington Star. Many persons when packing seem to lose sight altogether of when and under what circumstances they are to do the unpacking, and yet this is an important consideration when comfort is taken into account.

The things that will be first needed should of course go into the trunk last, such as the garments to sleep in and the toilet articles, as the destination is usually reached pretty late in the day. Few persons are silly enough to carry shoe polish or a bottle of ink in a trunk and thus risk their whole outfit for a trifling convenience that may be had even at a village shop in the far-away country no less than at any seaside or mountain resort to which one may be going.

Some kind hearted country friend may urge you to carry home in your trunk a jar of the delicious preserved quinces that you have been enjoying during your stay, but be sure to forego the pleasure of the preserves in favor of your best gowns or you will rue the day you transport it subject to the baggage smasher's gentle handling. Most trunks have separate compartments for crushable bonnets, but the flat hats of this season may easily be laid on top of the dresses and their bows and flowers straightened out if they should get a bit pressed down.

Good travelers see to it that their trunks have the hinges, locks and buckles in good order before packing, as that is the time to have them repaired if needed. They also have a long, broad strap to buckle round the trunk as a final security against bursting open, which carelessly packed trunks have been known to do.

How to Wrap Clothes.

In using the wringer it saves both the wash and the washerwoman to fold the clothes to an even thickness and exactly the breadth of the wringer rolls. Sending things through in lumps and bunches strains the springs and brings them quickly to the breaking point. It is much the same with turning the crank. One vicious jerk does more harm than steady rolling on a whole wash. As soon as washing is over use clear, warm water over the wringer, first removing it from the tub and standing it on end; then wipe it dry, put a little fresh oil in the bearings to guard against rust and set it away in a dry place, cool enough to prevent all danger of warping.

How to Protect Furniture.

Upholstered furniture may be protected from the ravages of moths, by spraying two or three times during the summer with naphtha or benzine. If you have no regular sprayer, take a small watering pot, such as is used for sprinkling house plants, and sprinkle in April, June and August. These materials will not harm the most delicate fabrics, and the unpleasant odor soon passes off if the article is placed in the air. Care must be taken not to carry on this work near the fire or by gas-light on account of the inflammability of the agents employed.

How to Whip Cream.

The cream must be sufficiently thick to hold the air and must be very cold and kept cold during the whipping. A small churn made from tin will whip one quart of cream in two minutes. Without a regular whip put the cream into a bowl and with an egg beater beat for a few moments; then skim off the whipped portion from the surface and drain in a colander, and so continue until all the cream has been whipped.

How to Clean Ostrich Feathers.

White ostrich feathers can be cleaned by making a mixture of white soap shaved into small pieces, boiling water and a little soda. After this has dissolved and cooled dip the feathers into it and then draw them gently through the hand, repeating the operation several times. Then rinse thoroughly in clean water, with a trace of bluing added. Shake, dry and curl.

How to Brush Silk.

A piece of velvetreen makes the best of all brushes for silk. When a black silk petticoat, for example, has grown dirty about the ruffle and plaiting, a piece of velvetreen will wipe all away perfectly. Even the softest of brushes is irritating to a silken surface, but the velvetreen removes the dirt without injury to the fabric.

How to Relieve Rheumatism.

To relieve rheumatism bathe the parts affected with hot water in which potatoes have been boiled. If used just before going to bed, by the next morning the pain will be much relieved if not removed.

How to Tighten Pingpong Rackets.

After the fire has lost the effect of tightening the vellum, or parchment, pingpong rackets should be soaked well with cold water and set up to dry. When dry, they will be found equal to new.

How to Brighten Oilcloth.

To brighten oilcloth wash with clean water to which some borax has been added and wipe with a flannel cloth dipped in milk and wrung as dry as possible.

PRESERVATION OF WOOD.

Many Ingenious Methods by Which Timber Is Kept From Decay.

On South Street are several concerns whose business is the preservation of wood, says the Vancouver correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. Each has its own favorite method, and each experiments more or less toward obtaining better and cheaper systems. The problem is very involved and is full of rich reward for successful inventors. "I have been in the business twenty years," said a member of one of these houses, "and although in that time the trade has progressed considerably, yet still much remains to be done, and whoever does it efficiently will make a large fortune. In spite of the substitution of iron and steel for wood in houses and bridge building and in the construction of ships, piers and other structures the consumption of wood increases yearly."

"All wood decays, and its value depends chiefly upon its durability. The element of decay is only one factor in the durability. Besides decay there is the destruction of wood by termites and other marine creatures and in tropical countries by the white ants and other forms of insect life. The simplest method of preservation is charring. Every old farmer knows that if he burns the end of a chestnut post in the fire until it is covered with a thin coat of charcoal it will last from ten to thirty years longer when set in the ground than if put there in its normal condition."

"The only process which seems absolutely efficient is to charge the wood with some poisonous fluid which is antiseptic, nonvolatile and permanent. Solutions of zinc, iron, copper, arsenic and mercury have been tried and have given good results. The best were obtained by forcing through the pores of the wood a strong solution of the double chloride of ammonia and mercury. After the wood was charged it was laid aside to dry, during which operation the ammonia and the water evaporated, leaving the corrosive sublimate uniformly distributed through the lignineous tissue. This made the lumber proof against any form of animal life."

"Why is it not universally used? The cost. It requires a heavy pressure and expensive apparatus, and the mercury itself is worth something like 50 cents a pound."

Sanitary.

According to the London Spectator, one of the current medical fads among the English laboring classes is the following: Snails crawling up a church wall are caught—those crawling down possess no virtue—placed in a pan with a little water and boiled, being stirred meanwhile with a quill plucked from a black crow. When the mixture has boiled down to the consistency of a salve, it is ready for use. When rubbed on the soles of the feet, it is a sure preventive of disease, being especially efficient in the case of what is locally known as "hinfocoxsy." It is also valuable in strengthening weak spines. Snails, whether raw or cooked, is not erident, are also considered a valuable remedy for consumption.

A Bicycle Invention.

Two ingenious cyclists have collaborated to turn the handle bar into a gas generator for an acetylene lamp. The handle bar is divided into a water chamber and a carbide chamber, the two being connected by a pipe, and the flow of water being controlled by a valve from outside. In the center is a gas chamber having an outlet to feed the lamp.

Lately there has come a fresh revelation regarding the moon. This is largely due to Professor William H. Pickering, who has studied the moon more assiduously than any other living astronomer, says Garrett P. Serviss in the New York Journal. The revelation is that despite former belief the moon is not dead.

There is something that lives and grows upon the lunar landscape. It may be some form of plant life, although Professor Pickering is not prepared to say that it is exactly vegetation. But it resembles vegetation more than anything else, and it covers vast areas that are like prairies in extent.

It has color. We may suppose that it is ablaze with something equivalent to flowers when the hot sun beats upon it. It makes its appearance as the sun rises and flourishes throughout the lunar day, which is fourteen times longer than our day, and when the long night comes on it perishes. But its brief duration is no argument against its possession of life. We have on the earth ephemeral forms of life whose entire span of existence is compressed between sunrise and sunset.

And if there is a kind of vegetation on the moon is it likely that that is the end of the story?

Professor Pickering also finds evidence of the existence of snow on some of the lunar mountains, and he has accumulated much evidence to prove that volcanoes are yet active on the moon.

All these things must cause our satellite to be regarded with fresh interest. Already the wrinkles seem less deep and repulsive. Perhaps Diana has been playing with us and all the while laughing behind her fan.

What a rebuke it would be if the first proof that there really is life in other worlds should come to us, not from distant Mars or gleaming Venus, but from the nearby, long despised moon, which we have so discourteously turned our backs upon?

A REALISTIC ACTOR.

BY WM. M. GREENFIELD.

Wanted—An experienced actor to star in "The Desperado." No amateurs need apply. John H. Hammer, 35 Blank Street, City.

This was the advertisement that appeared in the Evening Times of February 16, 1902. And that was the advertisement that made John Hammer the most miserable man in town. Said Hammer was an old theatrical manager, true and tried; a man who could pick a "comer" the instant he set eyes on him. But what made him so miserable was the fact that no "comer" came in answer to his advertisement.

The ad. had run three days, and at the end of that time Manager Hammer had seen almost every specimen of the "ham" actor that existed within the limits of the city. It was not to be wondered at that Manager Hammer was irritated at the incessant stream of "hams" that poured into his office. So it happened that on the morning of the "last run" of the ad., Manager Hammer was sitting in his office, chewing vexatiously at the end of a pencil and indignantly indulging in a heterogeneous assortment of violent expletives when the door opened and a tolerably handsome youth walked in with a stride and an air of assurance that made the ill-humored manager growl: "Another ham!"

The newcomer beamed indulgently on the manager, seated himself on a trunk, and said, with a rising inflection:

"Mr. Hammer?"

Your business?" demanded Mr. Hammer, not at all pleased with this visitor's conduct.

"I'll come to that in good time," was the cool reply. "Just now I would like your permission to light a cigarette."

"Smoke all you please," snarled the manager, and when the other had lighted his cigarette, he asked:

"What do you want?"

"I want to know if you want a good actor," replied the visitor.

"Do you know of one?" queried Hammer, eagerly, the storm clouds of anger partially falling from his face.

"I have known him—this one—all my life."

"Where is he?"

"Sir, before you stands Paul Denton, who has decorated the noble art, preserved it within his bosom, and let you are now looking upon the incarnation of genius!"

"So you are the good actor," sneered Hammer, derisively.

"Give me the opportunity, and I'll prove it," retorted the other. "My very person exudes the genius of Shakspeare; ah, my dear sir, I can see that you are animated by the subtle vapors that exude—"

"Enough of this, sir," roared the manager. "I am not here to be made a fool of by a simpleton. Get out of here before I kick you out."

The keenness of his anger and resentment had the effect of making the youth drop his jocular style. He meditated a moment, and then said, with all seriousness:

"Pardon, noble duke—er, I mean my dear sir, I merely—"

"Get out!"

"You refuse me a trial?"

"You're no actor."

"I beg to differ, but I am."

"You can act?" questioned Hammer.

"I can!"

"Well—" began the manager, irresolutely, but the youth broke in with:

"Try me!"

Five minutes later Hammer was putting the youth through the paces, so to speak, but shook his head in a disatisfied manner when the trial was over. Resuming his seat at the desk, he smiled somewhat superciliously and said:

"You're no better than the rest. Your acting is gesturework; you don't put strength in it. You're too artificial—I don't want that. I can make a wooden actor—you aren't natural; you walk as if on stilts, and roll the words around in your mouth as though they were molasses candy. You won't do! I want natural acting, and—Great G—d! What's the matter with him?"

For Denton had suddenly drawn a knife from his pocket, whirled it above his head, and advanced with long strides toward the frightened manager. The youth's erstwhile smiling countenance was distorted by a horrible scowl, which changed to a satanic grin as he advanced.

Hammer's rubicund face grew white as alabaster.

"What—what are you going to do?" he gasped.

A low maniacal laugh was the only reply. Instantly it dawned upon him that Denton had suddenly become insane. He was at the mercy of a maniac! He realized this with a sickening shudder, and made an effort to raise his feet, but his muscles refused to perform their functions and he sank back white and rigid.

The scintillating orbs of the other seemed to shoot darts of fire into his own. He tried to avert his gaze. It was in vain. Denton's eyes shone like two baleful meteors; they glowed with a hypnotic incandescence that was irresistible, and trembling in every limb, the theatrical manager sat there, covered by the sovereign glance of a human eye!

With soft, catlike tread, Denton crept upon him, flashing the murderous blade before his eyes. Suddenly he stopped, and in a shrill, pitched voice cried:

"He will have your blood! The blood that is on your hands will be covered by your own blood. God tells me to cut your heart out. I obey God!"

"The knife for the deed! Blood! Blood! I will swim in your blood!" and he uttered a series of blood-curdling screams that froze the poor manager with horror.

And then, when his voice failed with the paroxysms of his frenzied screams, he continued, in a low, harsh, grating tone:

"This mine! Your heart! This mine!" and with a horrible yell bounded straight at his victim.

Cold sweat exuded from every pore in the manager's body, but he was powerless to move. Even his vocal powers refused to come to his aid.

But Denton stepped back and surveyed him with those blazing orbs that burned into his very soul. But only for a moment did Denton pause. He screamed: "His heart! His heart!" and sprang forward.

In two leaps he reached his victim's side and raised the glittering knife.

Then came another transformation.

The "maniac" stopped suddenly, tossed the knife in a corner, and turned to face the terrified manager. His look of maniacal fury faded away for a quizzical smile.

"Have I frightened you?" he asked, in a tone punctiliously polite, but with a touch of derisiveness in it.

Then he added: "Was it natural enough?"

"Great goodness!" gasped the manager.

"Were you acting?"

"Was it natural enough?" reiterated Denton.

"Ye—yes," the manager feebly responded, pushing pen, ink and paper toward Denton.

"Sign this contract, please."—Petoskey (Mich.) Lyre.

Morgan Determined Not to Meddle With Coal Strike

HEWITT GIVES HIS VIEWS

Mrs. Mitchell Wants Recognition For Miners, Which Will Not Be Granted by Operators, Who Are Willing to Deal With Their Own Employees

New York, Sept. 12.—Abram B. Hewitt, former mayor of New York, gave out a statement yesterday in which he said he knew positively that J. P. Morgan would not interfere in the coal strike. Mr. Hewitt also said that the coal operators would not agree to arbitrate with John Mitchell, but that he believed they would consider grievances presented by their employees.

Continuing, Mr. Hewitt said: "I don't altogether blame Mitchell for bringing on this strike. Mitchell advised against the strike. When he called the convention at Rhinecliff he thought he would be able to control it and show what a big fellow he was. But those young fellows came in and wanted the strike and the convention got beyond Mitchell's control."

"Then he called the Indianapolis convention. He told the anthracite miners that he would not take the bituminous miners to go on a sympathetic strike. He did so and they refused. "Mr. Mitchell in public clamors for arbitration. But does he want arbitration? What Mitchell wants is recognition for himself. Mitchell is fighting for his very life, but there will be no recognition of Mitchell on the part of the operators and no arbitration between the operators and Mitchell."

"It was Mitchell who destroyed the principle of arbitration in the coal fields. The operators are willing and ready to adjust any grievances by concussions or otherwise with their own employees. But they will have nothing to do with Mitchell. That is positive."

"Some of my critics reproach me with being the owner of coal property and therefore not disinterested. Now all through my long life I believe that I have generally recognized that when I have expressed myself in disputes between capital and labor I have generally sided with the workingman."

"In 1870, during the days of the Molly Maguires, I made a tour of inspection through the mining regions. I found terrible conditions then. I found the men living under wretchedly brutal conditions. It was shortly after this that I became a director of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company. I advised the management to better the conditions of the workingmen. They replied that they could not do so and derive profit from their business. I did my best to convince them that it will always conduce to the profit of the employer to consider the interests of those working for them. Finally I brought them around to my point of view and it was not long before better conditions obtained among the employees of that company."

"When this strike was called the employees of the companies almost to a man owned their own homesteads. They were thrifty and respectable—respectable people as you will meet anywhere. They had $800,000 in the savings banks. They never wanted to strike, but now they have to live on their savings and walk around with their hands in their pockets, against their will, simply because they do not dare to go back to work."

Danvers, Mass., Sept. 11.—A car on the new Middleton and Lawrence street railway which left Lawrence for Salem at 5 p. m. yesterday with 60 passengers ran into a cow on a hill near North Andover, and was derailed, continuing for about 400 feet over ties and rock ballast. COLOMBIAN CRISIS

BATTLESHIP AND CRUISER

Ordered to Proceed to Panama to Protect American Interests—Interference With Traffic Across the Isthmus Will Not Be Permitted

Washington, Sept. 12.—Secretary Moody yesterday telegraphed to the commanders of the battleship Wisconsin, now at Bremerton, and the cruiser Cincinnati, at Cape Haytien, directing them to proceed as soon as possible to the Isthmus of Panama, the Wisconsin reinforcing the Hanger at Panama and the Cincinnati taking station at Colon. It will take the Wisconsin fully 20 days to make the long trip of over 4050 miles down the Pacific coast to Panama. The navy department had intended to send the Boston, which is now getting ready for service at San Francisco, to relieve or reinforce the Hanger, but the alarming situation which has so quickly arisen on the Isthmus prompted the officials to take more extensive measures to increase the naval representation of the United States in that section.

The Cincinnati will consume only a few days in her trip across from Cape Haytien, so that by the beginning of next week she should have reached the other terminal of the Panama railroad. The destruction of Admiral Killick's flagship swept away the entire naval force of Hayti, and naval officials believe that the Cincinnati can relinquish her post.

It is realized that, notwithstanding the absence of a Haytian navy on either side of the revolutionary struggle, there is danger that some of the ports where American property interests are large may suffer because of the practice which has grown up in the course of the rebellion of burning towns before evacuating them. Therefore it has been decided to send the gunboat Montgomery, now being overhauled at New York, to replace the Cincinnati at Port au Prince.

The commanders of the Cincinnati and Wisconsin will be instructed to enforce our treaty stipulations with Colombia strictly by preventing any interference with traffic across the Isthmus, and also to prevent a bombardment of Panama from the sea, on the ground that this in itself would constitute a menace to traffic. Neither the Wisconsin nor the Cincinnati carries very large marine contingents, but any lack in this respect, it is said, can be made up by equipping jacksies for shore duty should it become necessary to land a force on Colombian soil to enforce the guarantees of the treaty or to protect American interests.

The sudden turn of events near Panama came as a surprise to officials of the state and navy departments. Affairs in that quarter had quieted to such a degree that only the little gunboat Hanger kept watch. The Marietta was keeping a close eye on the trend of affairs in Venezuela, and the Cincinnati was performing similar duty in Hayti. The emergency arose so suddenly, therefore, that Hayti must be left unwatched by an American war vessel during the interval between the departure of the Cincinnati for Colon and the arrival of the Montgomery in Haytian waters.

It is thought the centre of trouble is likely to be at or near Panama city, and it is for that reason and because of the small size and complement of the Hanger that the big Wisconsin has been dispatched to the scene.

Later in the day the officials of the navy department decided to take no chances of an insufficient landing force in case of an emergency on the Isthmus, and orders were sent forward to the U. S. S. Panther, which is now enroute to League Island, to take aboard a battalion of marines upon her arrival and proceed to Colon. Orders were issued for the organization of the marines, who will number 350 men, and will be commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Russell, with Major Barrett as second in command. Captains Porter, Butler and Marx will command three of the four companies and Captain Lemly will act as quartermaster. It will be the duty of the marines to keep transit across the Isthmus clear. The marines performed a similar service in 1887.

Victory For Insurgents

BREWERY STRIKE ENDS

Daily Brooming U. S. Monthly Is to Be Settled by Arbitration

Boston, Sept. 12.—The brewery strike is ended. An agreement was signed yesterday afternoon by Charles Pfaff, chairman of the executive committee of the Boston Brewers' association, and Edmund F. Ward, who had charge of the brewery workers' end of the strike.

Concessions have been made on both sides. The master brewers have agreed by the men who kept on working when ordered to strike or were hired to take the places of the strikers. The strikers refused to consider the strike breakers' question in any way. The difficulty has been settled by referring the matter to the state board of arbitration, whose decision is to be final.

The agreement is made that all men who are out on strike or were hired out in connection with the strike shall be hired at not less than the same wages, provided they apply for work before 5 p. m. Sept. 12; all men so hired shall be reinstated in their former positions as far as possible; Boston-made beer to be taken off unfair list; the state board of arbitration to decide upon what terms the men now at work in the breweries shall be admitted into the unions. If they are admitted rotation shall apply to all contracts until January, 1903. The strike has been on since April 3.

Hay State Socialists' Ticket

Boston, Sept. 9.—For the first time in their political experience the Socialists of Massachusetts held a state convention yesterday as an official recognized Socialist party, for the purpose of nominating a state ticket to be voted on in November. The tickets for governor, John C. Chase, Haverhill; lieutenant governor, John Q. Adams, Amesbury; secretary of state, Edward A. Buckland, Holyoke; state treasurer, David Taylor, Boston; state auditor, S. F. Packard, Brockton; attorney general, Charles E. Fenner, Worcester.

Charged With Killing Wife

Wilton, Me., Sept. 11.—Evidence was introduced at the coroner's inquest yesterday which caused the jury to render a verdict that Josie Holbrook came to her death by reason of a bullet from a revolver fired by Herbert L. Holbrook, her husband. Witnesses testified that Holbrook and his wife were having an exciting dispute when the shooting occurred. A careful examination showed that the woman could not have committed suicide, as Holbrook claims. Holbrook was committed to jail without bail.

As to Baptismal Regeneration

New York, Sept. 8.—Rev. Dr. R. B. MacArthur, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, at the 100th meeting in the "Evangelist" tent yesterday assailed the doctrine of baptism. He declared that the dropping of water on an infant at birth was heathenism and that the idea that God would forever condemn an innocent but unbaptized babe makes him a tyrant, a monster and a demon. Dr. MacArthur's utterance had a wonderful effect on the audience. They rose to their feet and applauded wildly.

The Craig Inquest

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 11.—Joshua B. Holden and Edwin C. Woods of Boston were the principal witnesses at yesterday's sitting of the inquest into the death of Secret Service Officer Craig of the presidential party. These men, in company with J. J. McCarthy of Boston, were in carriages behind that occupied by the president at the time of the accident. Both Holden and Woods testified that the trolley car was running at a very fast rate of speed at the time.

Powder Magazine Explodes

Boston, Sept. 8.—One of the government powder magazines at old Fort Winthrop, on Governor's Island, Boston harbor, blew up shortly before 5 o'clock last evening with a detonation that was very forcibly apparent all over the city and which was heard at points 20 miles away. One dead man and five injured were brought to the city by the police boat and three men are missing. The dead man's name is Albert H. Cotton of Somerville.

Cigarette Paralyzed Brain

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 10.—Cigarette smoking is responsible for the incarceration of a Leominster boy in the Worcester insane hospital, according to the testimony of the physicians who examined him as to his sanity. The young man, William A. Field, belongs in North Leominster. The doctors found him to be suffering with paralysis of the brain, which they think was superinduced by the use of cigarettes.

Cuba Will Borrow $25,000,000
Havana, Sept. 10.—The loan bill passed the house of representatives yesterday by 48 votes to 2. President Palma is authorized to make a loan in the name of the nation for the amount of $25,000,000, the maximum rate of interest to be 5 percent. According to the bill the loan is payable in 40 years, payments to begin 10 years after the date of issue.

Alleged Bigamist Held
Portland, Me., Sept. 11.—Isaac W. Powers, who left his bride of three days at Bridgton three weeks ago, was arraigned in court here yesterday and bound over to the superior court in $4000 on the charge of bigamy. Held on Vagrancy Charge

Lord Roberts once found himself the centre of a circle of new friends in a London club. There was a very tall gentleman present, who, evidently believing himself to shine as a wit, seized every opportunity to raise a laugh at the other people's expense. On being introduced to Lord Roberts the wit bowed down patronizingly to his lordship and remarked:

"I have often heard of you, but shading his eyes with one hand, though the famous general, being small, could be seen only with difficulty." "I have never seen you."

To this Lord Roberts promptly replied:

Accurate Delay.

Many stories are told of the lack of punctuality upon southern railroads. It is said that when a New Englander found his train, advertised to leave at 11 o'clock, starting at exactly that time, he complimented the conductor.

"Just on time, I see," he said gaily. "All this talk I've heard of lateness of your trains is without foundation, I've no doubt."

The conductor smiled at him gently. "This train, sir," he said without trace of embarrassment, "is not today's 11 o'clock train, sir. It is yesterday's 11 o'clock. Today's will probably not come here from way down until tomorrow, sir."—Youth's Companion.

There is a man who teaches he is head of the house. This particular has several small children, and pleases him to discourse a great deal the training of the young. A few ago he had friends visiting him, two little sons began to play a noisily. It is one of his theories children should obey implicitly, and wanted his friends to see how he ried it out in the training of his family. "Johnny," he said sternly, "stop that noise instantly." John looked up in surprise, then grinned little. "Oh, Freddy," he said to brother, as they went on with the romp, "just listen to papa trying to like mamma."

POEM BY LIEUT. GOV. COLLINS.

"Nathaniel West's petition, written as an appeal for charity to the children and grandchildren of his patron Governor Bradford, Christmas, 1820, by C. Collins." From manuscript owned by Miss Mary Hazard, Newport, R. I.

1. "A Merry Christmas to you all! Says poor Nathaniel West; Long may my patron's children live, With health and plenty blest."

2. Let's call to mind the happy days, (With pleasure sure we may) When your good father ruled the Mount With hospitable sway.

3. Father to all beneath his roof, Where plenty always flowed; His bounty he with joyful heart On every one bestowed.

4. When'er he met the coming guest, The beggar or the Count, The language of his heart was still "Ye're welcome to the Mount."

5. Bright glow'd the fire, round whirled the spit, The willing cellar bled; The table groan'd beneath the load, 'Till every guest was fed.

6. Oft have I heard that table roar While mirth and wine went round; The happy host, and joyous guest Made all the hall resound.

7. The kitchen caught the joyful glee, And echoed back the strain; While rallying round the second cut, The elder flow'd again.

8. O! kitchen, scene of all my joys, Where want was never known, Where squashes, hams and renet bags In beautiful order shone.

9. Off in the field this furrow'd brow Has sweat beneath the fork; But oftimes in the kitchen sweet While eating beef and pork.

10. E'en now, it makes my brow perspire And sets my throat to itching To think of mugs of elder drink In that same glorious kitchen.

11. O, halcyon days! O, happy times! To memory most dear; Thanksgiving then came every day, 'Twas Christmas all the year.

12. Old Uncle Sam, and Hannah Greene, (More lucky far than I) While yet their master blest'd this earth, In good old age did die.

13. But I have in his service lived Full three and twenty years; And never of the morrow thought, Devoid of care and fears.

14. To tell of half his good to me My tale would never end; God rest his soul! I'll say no more—I've lost a real friend.

15. But now, the times are sadly changed; I'm old, and pitiful poor; In tattered rags, and feet unsod, I shiver at your door.

16. No good roast beef my waistcoat lines, No cider warms my heart; No cotton shirt—or woolen hose, To ward off winter's smart.

17. Could your good Father view me thus, From realms of heavenly bliss; With accents such as angels use His language would be this—

18. "Child, clothed naked, house the poor, And feed him at your board;" 'Tis my request—his God's command, And here rests your reward.

19. *The person alluded to in the 4th verse was Jonathan Russell, esquire.

Haytian Gunboat's Surrender Demanded by Germans

KILLICK ASKED FOR TIME

Then Fired the Vessel, Which Was Later Bombaraded Until She Was Immersed—Sequel to the Seizure of Merchantman's Cargo

Port au Prince, Sept. 8.—The German gunboat Panther arrived here Sept. 5 and received instructions from the German government to capture the Firminist gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot. She left immediately for Gonaves, the seat of the Firminist government. The Panther found the Crete-a-Pierrot in the harbor of Gonaves and the commander of the German gunboat informed Admiral Killick, on the Crete-a-Pierrot, that he must remove his crew and surrender his vessel in five minutes' time. Admiral Killick asked that this time be extended to 15 minutes. This request was granted on the condition that the arms and ammunition on board the Crete-a-Pierrot should be abandoned when her crew left her.

The crew of the Crete-a-Pierrot left that vessel amid great disorder. At the end of 15 minutes the Panther sent a small boat carrying an officer and 20 sailors who were to take possession of the Firminist gunboat. When these men had arrived at a point about 50 yards from the Crete-a-Pierrot, flames were seen to break out on board of her. She had been fired by her crew before they left her. The Panther then fired on the Crete-a-Pierrot until she was immersed. Thirty shots all told were fired.

Gonaves, Hayti, Sept. 11.—The body of Admiral Killick has been recovered from the Crete-a-Pierrot, which he fired when the gunboat Panther attempted to capture her. The surgeon of the Crete-a-Pierrot, who was asleep in his cabin, and two sailors of that vessel also perished.

Admiral Killick recently declared Cape Haytien to be blockaded, but this blockade was admitted to be inefficient and was abandoned by the admiral after Commander McCrea of the U. S. S. Machias had made certain representations to him concerning it. In a letter to the Firminist admiral Commander McCrea informed him that he was charged with the protection of British, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Russian and Cuban interests, as well as those of the United States, and that he would prevent a second bombardment of Cape Haytien without due notice.

When it became apparent that the blockade was inefficient Commander McCrea proceeded to Cagnette, found the Crete-a-Pierrot in that port and sent Admiral Killick a letter, in which he said that the government of the United States considered the blockade of Cape Haytien not effective even as a "de facto" blockade, and that the United States denied him (Admiral Killick) the right to search or visit any American or foreign vessel attempting entrance to the harbor of Cape Haytien.

To this communication Admiral Killick replied that he appreciated the conditions and admitted the inefficiency of the blockade, which he abandoned. The blockade incident was thus closed, and the Machias sailed Aug. 30 from Gonaves for Boston.

The Crete-a-Pierrot later stopped the German steamer Marcomannica, sent an armed force on board and took possession of the war munitions she carried.

Candidate For Mayor—at Present

We've one that deserves special mention. The springs are all blue tempered steel and are placed on a wood base to avoid any sagging; there's no excelsior used in the filling—all moss and tow; the edges are made firm on a spring frame; the covering is a heavy corduroy, tufted from head to foot.

Soft, luxurious, sleep inviting—can you picture the difference between this and a stiff neck? And only $12.
